CHARGED with the murder of David Montes, member of a family of valley farmers near Toluca, in August, 1915, Gilberto Carbajal was arrested by special agent Robinson, of the U. S. A., Friday night, terminating a chase which had carried local officers twice to California in a futile effort to arrest the man.

Carbajal was arrested in the railroad yards, and a charge of vagrancy preferred against him. City detective Juan Franco, noting the name on the records Saturday, identified the man, with result that the murder charge was preferred.

Montes was killed, it is charged, after an argument with Carbajal over a girl at a dance. After the quarrel Montes left the dance, it is said, and was followed by Carbajal. Later, it is charged, Carbajal called him to see him and stabbed him to death.

Last July, while detective Franco was spending his vacation at Venice, Calif., he says he saw Carbajal on a street there, gave chase, but lost sight of the man. He carried his search to Fresno, San Jose and other cities without success. Later, a deputy sheriff was sent to California, expecting that confidential information might lead to the capture.

Carbajal, officers say, is an ex-

FOREIGNERS COMPRISE NINETY PERCENT OF RADICALS IN U. S., ATTORNEY GENERAL REPORTS

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 11.—The campaign against the high cost of living, efforts to break up trusts and combinations in restraint of trade and the government's fight against radicalism are reviewed by attorney general Palmer in his annual report sent to congress today.

In a discussion of the radical problem, Mr. Palmer discloses that the department of justice has developed a card index system containing more than 200,000 cards, giving detailed data on the activities of ultraradicals and their organizations as well as a complete library of reference on the general radical movement.

Ninety per cent of the communist and anarchistic agitation during the past year, the attorney general says, is traceable to aliens. This agitation, he adds, is not confined to the so-called "economic evils" but has been directed also toward stirring up racial prejudice. One of the fertile fields, he says, is among the negroes.

The foreign language press has been particularly noticeable for its strong ultraradical leanings, the attorney general says.

Twenty-eight anti-trust cases are pending in the various district courts over the country and the supreme court of the United States. Frank K. Nabors, assistant to the attorney general, in his special report on the subject, says that prosecution of these cases is proceeding as rapidly as the machinery of the courts having jurisdiction can be moved.

The report shows that in its campaign to lower living costs, the department brought a total of 2918 legal actions under the Lever act. Other actions included prosecutions under the provisions against hoarding, manipulation of food stocks, conspiracies, etc.

Mr. Palmer explains that the department's work, especially in connection with its drive on profiteers, has been handicapped by an insufficient number of attorneys, auditors, accountants and similar employees.

The number of federal prisoners, described as major offenders, held in the various penitentiaries on June 30 was 4737 as compared with 4788 on the same date a year previous, says the report. Of these, 2383 were confined to federal prisons, 189 in state and territorial penitentiaries, 235 in state reformatories, 190 in national training schools and the remainder in miscellaneous institutions.

Mr. Palmer makes numerous recommendations for changes in laws, most of which have been sought for several years by his predecessors. He asks that the right of the government to have a stenographic before grand juries be definitely established by legislative action in order that verbatim records of all such investigations may be preserved.

Included in the other recommendations are those provisions making a federal indictment run to all parts of the country; legislation enabling the settlement of certain claims against vessels under government payment during the war; permission for appeal by the government to the board of customs appeals; provisions for payment of transportation of discharged prisoners to their homes at time of discharge, which may be different than the place from which they were indicted; and the placing of bankruptcy referees on a salary instead of a fee basis of compensation.

Local Firm Establishes Branches Over The World

Harry Hyman, president and managing director of the China Palace company organization, has gone east to make a tour of the factories and research laboratories and to establish an office in New York city, from which point a great deal of its future business will be done.

Mr. Hyman spent three and a half months in Japan the past year, making connections for the firm and now, with office and sample rooms in Mexico City, New York, Japan and Europe, the China Palace company makes new imports as a leading import and export firm.

Mr. Hyman will be absent several weeks.
